We are pleased to announce that the 2019 Levi-Civita Prize for the Mathematical and Mechanical Sciences will be presented to Prof. George Ellis for his outstanding research and achievements in Relativistic Cosmology and General Relativity which have been an exciting and challenging stimulus to a whole generation of scientists. The Levi-Civita Prize carries a silver medal and a diploma and it is accompanied by The Levi-Civita Lecture honoring the memory of the famous Italian mathematical physicist with a distinguished contribution of the recipient of the Prize.

G.F.R Ellis, Fellow of the Royal Society, is Professor Emeritus of the Mathematics Department, University of Cape Town in South Africa and McVittie Visiting Professor of Astronomy at Queen Mary College (London University).
